Welcome Back to MSU!

Every year the Department of Student Life publishes the Success @ State newsletter series for MSU students and their families (also available on our website at studentlife.msu.edu). These newsletters are designed to assist you as you transition back to life as a Spartan. This edition of Success @ State is designed specifically for students (and their families) in their second year at Michigan State. You undoubtedly learned a great deal during your first year, but there will be some new challenges this coming year. Welcome back ... we are glad you have chosen to continue as a Spartan!

Spartan Money $marts

Tuition, books, recreation, food…it all costs money. There is no single answer to questions about money and how much it costs to be a student at MSU, but there are some general guidelines that may help you in making financial decisions.

1. Make a list of anticipated expenses. From this list, families should decide which are covered by the student, which by the parent/guardian, etc. There is no one right answer to who should pay for which part of college, but knowing ahead of time may alleviate a lot of tension later.

2. Credit Cards. Students will receive countless offers to get a credit card. Some students find credit cards a safe and convenient means of payment. Others, however, (if not careful) find themselves owing significant money to the credit card companies. As such, students and parents are encouraged to discuss credit card use prior to arrival on campus. In cases where a student obtains credit cards for “emergencies”, everyone should agree what constitutes an emergency.

3. Working while enrolled in school. The decision to work depends on a variety of factors such as class load, job demands, financial need, and the individual student. Students who are good at time management and take no more than 15 credit hours per semester may be able to work between ten to twenty hours per week. In fact, research indicates that working less than twenty hours per week in an on-campus job helps students become better acquainted with the institution and complements their academic learning. Students are encouraged to make school their top priority. However, with proper time management, students can enjoy sufficient time to prepare for their classes, socialize, participate in extracurricular activities, and work.

To learn more about part-time student jobs, contact the Michigan State University Student Employment Office, 113 Student Services or 110 Nisbet Building, (517) 353-9510, or visit their website at careernetwork.msu.edu.

Hey You…Get Involved!

Alright, you’ve been here for at least a year. Have you joined a Registered Student Organization yet? Have you become a part of ASMSU (your undergraduate student government)? Have you joined a chapter in MSU’s Greek community? If you have answered “no” to these questions, the only remaining question is WHY NOT? Involvement in student groups can provide you with great opportunities to meet new friends, assume leadership positions, and apply what you are learning in classes to real-life issues.

If you are interested in getting involved, but not sure how to go about it, check out the list of Registered Student Organizations that is available on the Department of Student Life’s website at studentlife.msu.edu. The list has contact information for most of the over 660 organizations. Would you rather meet with some of the organizations’ membership in-person? Then plan to attend Fall Welcome Spartan Spectacular from 4-10pm at Munn Field on Tuesday, August 27 to be a part of Sparticipation ‘13. For more information visit fallwelcome.msu.edu.

Campus Sustainability – Be Spartan Green

Every day, MSU Spartans work to create life-changing solutions for a better world.

Our actions are powered by more than a century-and-a-half commitment to empowering ordinary people to do extraordinary things. Working together we can move mountains—or preserve them for future generations.

MSU is one of the world’s top research universities and one of the nation’s top sustainable campuses. Through teaching, research, outreach, and campus innovation—Spartans are working to improve the quality of life at MSU and in communities around the globe.

The impact? Clean and affordable energy, access to education, safe food, and clean water supplies. This means improved health, less work, more efficiency, and a more hopeful and sustainable future for all.

There are plenty of opportunities for students to get involved in sustainability at MSU; visit bespartangreen.msu.edu to see how you can Be Spartan Green!
Wellness Matters for Personal & Academic Success

To all our returning MSU students, we want to say “welcome back to another exciting year!” By now you are probably aware that successful transition to college isn’t just about academics. And as a returning student, you may have experienced firsthand or know of classmates who had health problems or challenges that made it difficult for them to attend class, concentrating or completing assignments on time and whose grades suffered as a result. Indeed, it is the loss of a student’s health (physical or emotional) or sense of safety (physical or emotional) that can most significantly impact a student’s ability to be truly successful academically.

Every two years we conduct a campus wide survey called the National Collegiate Health Assessment (NCHA) survey. This survey asks questions about the health and wellness behaviors, perceptions and concerns of MSU students that have impacted their health and/or academics. Through this information gathering we are able to provide you information, resources and tools to ensure your personal and academic success while at MSU.

For example, something as simple as a cold or flu can cause one to miss class or not complete homework. Indeed, NCHA results show: 51% of MSU students reported having had a cold or flu in the last academic year; and, 16% stated that had a negative impact on their academics. A simple preventative measure for you in the upcoming year? Wash your hands, and cover your mouth when you cough. Other health concerns are more complicated, but the impact can be more negative: 84% of MSU students stated they were affected by stress (to the point of feeling overwhelmed at least once during the year); 25% reported that their academic performance was negatively impacted by stress. Did you know that you can help yourself decrease stress and help manage it better through simple strategies such as using a planner, not falling behind on assignments and scheduling regular activities such as exercise, talking issues over with family and friends, getting enough sleep, etc.

The results from NCHA 2012 will once again be highlighted in a brochure, I’m a Spartan-True Life: Wellness Matters for Personal and Academic Success. It will be available during Fall 2013 online at www.olin.msu.edu (just click on TRU-LIFE). Other topics covered include the following: tobacco use, nutrition, physical activity, injury prevention, pregnancy prevention, sexually transmitted infection prevention, sexual assault and relationship violence prevention, depression and anxiety, suicide prevention, and alcohol and drugs. Each topic has what MSU students say and do (perception vs. reality), why it matters and what you can do to help yourself or others. Be sure to check it out!!

Our primary job and that of our colleagues here at MSU, is to help you, the student, be academically and personally successful at MSU. We believe we can help you maximize your ability to do your academic best by providing you the information and resources you need to help you avoid and/or minimize the impact of health problems or poor lifestyle choices. We wish you a safe and healthy journey through your years at Michigan State University. Indeed, with this information, you can look forward to a challenging, exciting and successful year ahead.

Learning Outside The Classroom

Being a student is not just about taking classes and fulfilling degree requirements. It’s about becoming involved in your whole undergraduate experience. There are many ways for you to enhance your employability, develop marketable skills, and prepare for a career by learning outside of the classroom. Be sure to take advantage of these opportunities!

STUDENT ORGANIZATIONS: Try joining one of the hundreds of student organizations on campus. It’s a great way to meet people, develop special interests and gain leadership skills. A complete list of student organizations on campus is available from the Department of Student Life at studentlife.msu.edu.

STUDY ABROAD: With over 300 programs on every continent – from Asia to Antarctica – study abroad can give your degree an international edge. MSU offers a broad range of learning experiences far beyond the borders of East Lansing in more than 60 different countries. Programs are available every semester (including winter and spring breaks) and offer a diverse selection of courses – making it possible for any major to participate! Internships and community engagement models will allow you to get hands-on experience that will contribute to the local culture and provide reflection on your professional development. MSU also makes study abroad financially accessible with liberal financial aid policies as well as offering numerous study abroad scholarships and grants to help ease financial concerns. Most of all, you’ll have the experience of a lifetime while acquiring independence, self-confidence and global awareness. Visit the web at studyabroad.msu.edu for more information.

2013 Fall Housing Fair

Looking for a place to live next year or haven’t thought about it yet? Then plan to attend the Fall 2013 Housing Fair on Thursday, October 17, 2013 from Noon-5:30pm. at the MSU Union Building.

Come to the Fall 2013 Housing Fair and check out your options! Property representatives will be in attendance in addition to service and education providers.

More than 50 property representatives will be attending with information on dozens of area apartments, houses, duplexes, on-campus living opportunities and more. For more information visit studentlife.msu.edu.

Don’t Miss This Opportunity to Showcase Your Talents

The University Undergraduate Research and Arts Forum (UURAF) provides a wonderful opportunity for undergraduate students to showcase their original research, scholarship, and creative works in a venue that is professional, academic, and fun. The Forum is held every spring and is open to all MSU students who are engaged in original work.

Students participate in a conference-like setting, showcasing their work through oral, poster, or performance demonstration sessions. Faculty members serve as judges, and students are eligible to win monetary prizes for their work. Registration for presenters will open in January of 2014. For more information, please visit urra.msu.edu/uuraf or email ugrsrec@msu.edu.

For more information, please visit ugrsrec@msu.edu.
Connect Your Academic and Career Interests

Now that you’ve settled into life at State, it’s time to begin exploring ways to connect your academic and career interests. Take time to talk with your professors, advisors, and fellow students about majors, specializations and other areas of interest. If you’re not sure about what you’re interested in or have too many interests, you may want to meet with a career advisor to help you focus on what’s most important to you. Set a career advising appointment at CareerNetwork.msu.edu/Advising.

Taking Risks Broadens Your Vision for the Future

- Get a job or internship on campus or in the local area to build critical career and work place skills. Current openings are available 24/7 in your MySpartanCareer account at the CareerNetwork.msu.edu website.
- Experiment with electives, Study Abroad, and Alternative Break programs.
- Go to a career fair or the graduate/professional school fair to get ideas or make early contacts.
- Talk with faculty about what you’re interested in or have too many interests, you may want to meet with a career advisor to help you focus on what’s most important to you. Set a career advising appointment at CareerNetwork.msu.edu/Advising.

Living Off-Campus This Year?

Living off-campus this year? Welcome to the City of East Lansing! East Lansing is a wonderful community with a diverse mix of families, students and young professionals residing in close-knit, cozy neighborhoods.

Michigan State University and the City of East Lansing have worked together to enhance student community relations. As Spartans, we ask you to invest in the East Lansing community and treat it with the same respect and caring as you do your own hometown!

There will be many people supporting you while you live in the community. A few of your resources include:
- MSU’s College Life: East Lansing website, collegelifeEL.msu.edu, designed to help students learn about being involved in the community, as well as living off-campus. The site includes information about arts, entertainment, housing resources, transportation options and more.
- MSU’s Housing Listing Service is a free service available to the MSU community that features multiple property listings and includes advanced search filters, a roommate finder, message boards, and educational resources. Visit officemessages.msu.edu to start your search.
- The City of East Lansing’s dynamic website that features information about City services, events and activities. Visit the section especially designed for students to learn about shopping and dining, arts and entertainment, as well as city ordinances and community resources. Visit www.cityofeastlansing.com to check it out!
- The Community Relations Coalition is a group that was created to enhance relationships and improve communication in the university-community. The group is made up of students, local residents, City and University representatives and others. The group employs MSU student interns living in the neighborhoods near campus and serve as resources to students and residents. Visit www.WeAllLiveHere.org to learn more and meet the interns.

Part of being a member of the community involves lots of opportunities and responsibilities. East Lansing and MSU ask all Spartans:
- To become involved in the community and invest in the resources, services and opportunities available.
- To contribute to their community and give back through service! Learn about the opportunities at servicelearning.msu.edu or www.cityofeastlansing.com/volunteer.
- To remember that many families live a “first shift” lifestyle—up early, work/school during the day, and retire early. College students tend to have a “second shift” lifestyle where everything starts (and ends) later. Being aware of these differences can help avoid noise problems.
- To vote - check out YouVote.msu.edu to register.
- To get to know their neighbors so you’ll feel more at home when living off-campus. Knowing each other will help you resolve any problems or differences that might arise.
- To contribute to their neighborhood is different and prides itself on unique characteristics. Find out which neighborhood you live in!

As you begin to explore your involvement in the City of East Lansing, we encourage you to take a few minutes to learn more about the community you now call home. Here are a few fun facts:
- East Lansing is a community of more than 48,000 people, including 12,000 MSU students.
- East Lansing is a family town, with 3,900 students in K-12 schools.
- East Lansing is famous for its many festivals, including the Art Festival, Summer Solstice Jazz Festival and Great Lakes Folk Festival. Event information can be found at cityofeastlansing.com under the Community Events department.
- East Lansing is a community of neighborhoods. Each neighborhood is different and prides itself on unique characteristics. Find out which neighborhood you live in!

For additional information and resources on East Lansing and living off-campus, visit collegelifeEL.msu.edu. Contact Community Liaison Erin Carter at csl@msu.edu for assistance or with any specific questions you have.

Welcome to the East Lansing community!
